MOA reduces trash by 50%

By DJ Yap

HOMEOWNERS of condominiums and subdivisions will have to reduce their garbage by half within a year under a new agreement signed by the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) and 11 local government units in Metro Manila yesterday.

The memorandum of agreement (MOA) approved by Environment Secretary Ramon Paje and 11 Metro mayors paved the way for the establishment of an ecological solid waste management (ESWM) system for homeowners associations of subdivisions and condominiums.

The system involves "segregation at source, segregated collection and establishment of a materials recovery facility (MRF)," according to the MOA.

"The homeowners associations should also have, within the same period, diverted at least 50 per cent of their waste and publicized reports on ... ordinances, violations and model practitioners," it said.

On the other hand, the local governments shall be responsible for identifying a nongovernment or any private sector organization to its partner in identifying the appropriate ESWM system to be adopted by the subdivisions or municipalities.

They will also be in charge of deploying counterpart personnel, including "environmental police," to homeowners who will assist in the implementation of the technical, enforcement and financial aspects of the project.

"This partnership we are set to forge with all local executives of Metro Manila is proof that the DENR is serious and relentless in the pursuit of our mandate in solid waste management and we are committed to extend the necessary assistance to those who will help us implement it," Paje said.

According to the DENR chief, under Republic Act 9003 or the Ecological Solid Waste Management Act, the responsibility of establishing an ESWM system falls on local governments.

The participating cities and towns are Caloocan City, Pasay City, Taguig City, Pa-

Super sits down with 'Gossip Girl's' Ed Westwick to talk about Blair, bow ties and his Penshoppe endorsement

ED WESTWICK is the new face of Penshoppe

By Pam Pastor

YOU don't always get frisked before an interview. You don't always get asked to surrender your phone either.

Then again, you don't always get to interview Ed Westwick.

The British actor, who plays the scheming but undeniably sexy Chuck Bass on Gossip Girl, was in Manila this past week, shooting his campaign for clothing brand Penshoppe.

Penshoppe's Brand Director Alex Mendoza said, "We were looking for a fresh international face to headline the new and revitalized Penshoppe."

Gossip Girl fans in Manila clearly approve of the choice. Alex said, "We're shocked because we released a behind the scenes photo last night of one of our campaign shoots and we got 20,000 hits in two hours. Our Twitter followers tripled."

Surreal

The campaign hasn't even been launched but it already seems to be working. As early as now, Ed's fans have been flooding Penshoppe's Twitter and Facebook accounts, pestering to buy any product he endorses.

"It's happening so fast, it's so surreal. It's a whirlwind for all of us," says Alex. "Ed has lived up to our expectations and beyond. He is such a natural in front of the camera. The clothes look like they were made for him. Perfect."

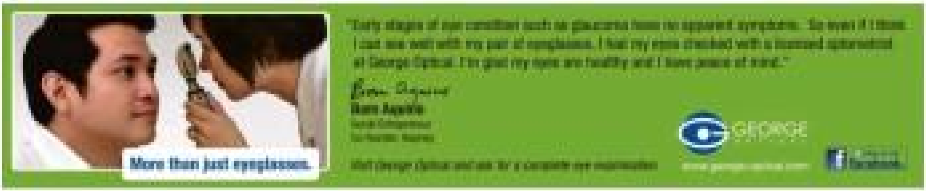

Hours before the private party Penshoppe hosted for Ed at The Peninsula Manila's Salon De Ning last Thursday, Super sat down with the actor in his presidential suite. Wearing a jacket from Penshoppe's Traditional

Not even bad weather could stop the blazing exchange of passions at Bonifacio Global City (BGC) – the home of passionate minds.

The first-ever BGC Passion Parade held last May 28 along the main thoroughfares of Bonifacio High Street, served as a huge vibrant rainbow that brightened up everyone's mood after a gloomy spell of rain.

The gigantic balloons ranging from 7-12 feet high amazed everyone. Vivid colors from balloon sculptures like an oversized dog, camera, ice cream, and some of the district's art installations like "Specific Gravity" and "Hearsay" cleared the sky and drove the drizzly clouds away.

The marching line was also joined by some of BGC's passion communities composed of runners, cyclists, skateboarders, Mini Cooper and Miata cars aficionados who all marched in with their individual gimmicks and stunts. [illegible] is in harmony.

"Be in whatever form it is – a parade, a fair, or series of shows, we are committed to supporting and celebrating the different passions of the communities in BGC through unique and innovative ways," Manny Blas, BGC's Head for Commercial Operations, said.

This one-of-a-kind parade is surely a first in the country. And for all those who missed it, catch another exciting passion demonstration with more balloons and more fun on Saturday, June 4, 5 PM at the Bonifacio High Street.

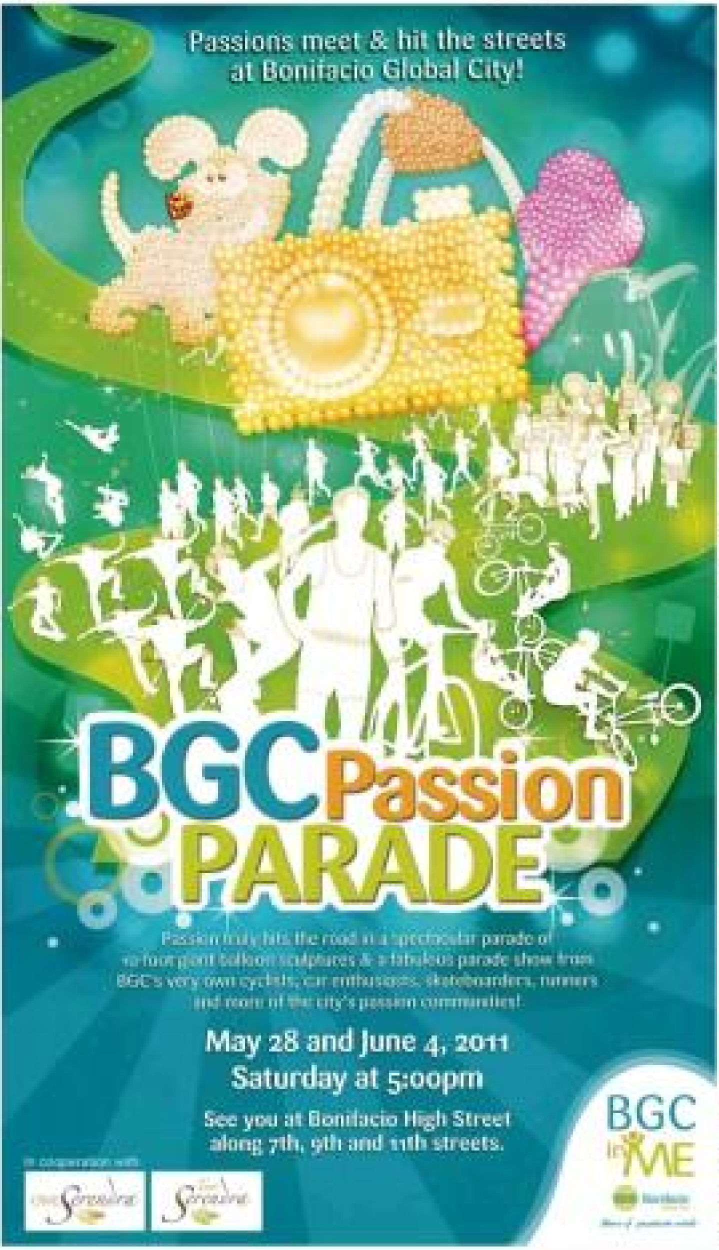

The BGC Passion Parade was made possible in part by One Serendra and Two Serendra.

NIEVERA. Romantic songs popularized by the country's top songwriters

By Bliss P. Aeto

CHARICE HAS something for everyone in her latest recordings. She'll enjoy grooving to the pulse-pounding beats of the dance single, "Louder" (now available on iTunes), which derives its charm from the singer's youthful vibe and the song's devil-may-care spirit. In it, the teenage performer sings about moving on after a heartbreak: "I'm staring out my window/ And the rain is pouring down/ But I'm not gonna drown/ I'm gonna be a soldier."

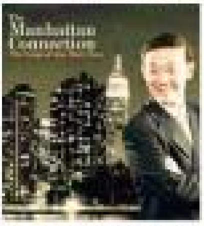

But, if you prefer show-stopping ballads in the mold of Whitney Houston's "I Have Nothing" and "Run to You," you will be pleased to listen to "As Long As You're There," Charice's solo number in "Glee: The Music, Vol. 6," the hit TV show's sixth and final soundtrack for Season Two. Interestingly, unlike most cuts in the album's contemporary, 18-track repertoire, "As Long As You're There" is one of only three originals.

We're also looking forward to the single, "One Voice," which Charice recorded with 17-year-old Filipino-Mexican-American singer, Jasmine Villegas, to raise funds for Gawad Kalinga. If you recall, the latter sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" during the Manny Pacquiao-Juan Manuel Marquez world championship match in 2008. Recently, she

DioGuardi sheds light on her return to TV

NEW YORK—As a former "American Idol" judge, singer, songwriter and producer, Kara DioGuardi, made her mark offering no-nonsense feedback to contestants hoping for stardom in the popular singing contest.

Now, she returns as a judge on Bravo's new show, "Platinum Hit." The series offers a glimpse into the world of emerging singer-songwriters on their journey to becoming the next big hitmakers, and offers a $100,000 cash prize and a record-publishing deal. DioGuardi talked about the show, songwriting and a famous 2009 bikini stunt on national television.

What can viewers expect when tuning in to "Platinum Hit?"

The show is completely different since it's not about performing, it's about the song. And, it's about finding the next great songwriting talent and looking into the process of songwriting.

DIOGUARDI. Returns as a judge on "Platinum Hit."

Reactions

When you were on "American Idol," there was a lot of chatter about you. Were you surprised at the fans' reaction to you joining the show?

Not really, because I think they didn't quite understand my role. Some thought I was there to take over Paula's role; they didn't understand that I was in the music business. When I first got the job, I said, 'Why do you need a fourth judge?' It was puzzling. I can only imagine what it was like for the viewers.

Do you prefer collaborating with other songwriters or writing solo?

I don't have a preference. I love it all. I get something different from each session I walk into.

Sometimes, it's great to work with an artist who has a specific vision. I enjoyed working with Pink, when I cowrote 'Sober' with her. She has a distinct idea about what she wanted to say and how she wants to say it, and I find that refreshing.

How do you strike the right balance in offering feedback to contestants without crushing their dreams?

People have to get used to the idea that there's a lot of rejection in the music business, no matter how successful you are. If that's what crushes your dream, then get out of the business, because if you can't stand the rejection, this industry will crush you. What it's really about is how to take the feedback and learn from it.

Constructive

How would you characterize yourself as a judge?

I'm pretty tough on this show, but I'm always constructive. You may not always see it, because it doesn't get into the edit. I tell them how to do it better.

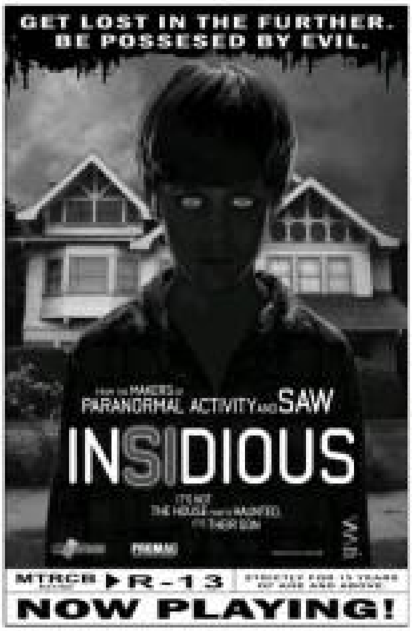

What advice do you have for those just starting out?

It's muscle memory, songwriting. In
